When? 10 March 2014, 09.30 – 17.00

Where? Holiday Inn Bloomsbury, Coram Street, London WC1N 1HT

10
March

Are you a nurse, midwife, pharmacist or allied health professional curious about a career in clinical health research, or in the early stages of your research career?

Want to learn more about National Institute for Health Research training opportunities?

Ready to be inspired by stories from clinical health researchers?

Then join us at the first non-medical professions researchers meeting for 150 clinical research active and aspiring researchers on 10 March 2014.

Registration is open to all nurses, midwives, allied health professionals and pharmacists. This meeting will provide you with tools and information to start and enhance your career in clinical health research, including:

- Information about NIHR infrastructure and training opportunities
- Experiences of inspirational clinical researchers who have successfully built an academic research career
- Guidance on finding a good mentor and getting the most from the relationship
- Advice on how to improve your networking
- Support on how to make the most of your training opportunities
- Opportunities to network with peers, speakers and NIHR representatives.

Attendance at the meeting is free of charge for all nurses, midwives, allied health professionals and pharmacists.

Places are limited and are expected to be filled quickly so please register as soon as possible at www.profbriefings.co.uk/nihr/bachr2014
